3. Remote Work During Temporary Health Issues

Can an employee work from home during a temporary health issue? Yes. When an employee experiences a temporary, non-critical medical condition, injury, or recovery phase that restricts commuting but does not impair the ability to perform core job functions, the employee may request temporary full-time remote work for up to four (4) consecutive weeks. To initiate this arrangement, the employee must submit a written request accompanied by a doctor's recommendation to both their reporting manager and the HR People Operations team. The request will be reviewed and approved within 48 hours.

4. Home Workspace and IT Security Requirements

Employees working remotely must ensure a dedicated, ergonomic workspace with a secure high-speed internet connection. All work must be conducted on NovaTech-managed laptops connected via the corporate VPN. Company equipment stipends provide a one-time reimbursement of up to $300 for home office setup.
